

Authors of RoSE Volume 2 Nr.1 2011

Maximilian Buchka studied the Philosophy of Education, School Pedagogy and Pedagogics of Religion in Münster, and concluded with studies in Special Education in Cologne. He worked for 14 years as a special education teacher, vice-principle of a teacher training seminar for special education and as director of a special education school. After receiving his doctoral degree from the University of Dortmund in Education Science, Special and Therapeutic Education and School Pedagogy he became a Professor of Education for Special Needs and Social Pedagogy at the Catholic University of Cologne. As of 1993 he was also a guest professor for Therapeutic Education at the Comenius University in Bratislava/Slovakia and as of 2010 is engaged as guest professor for Special and Early Child Education at the Alanus University of Arts and Sciences in Alfter near Bonn, Germany.

E-mail: Maximilian.Buchka@alanus.edu

Petra Böhle has studied arts and pedagogy at Ottersberg and Alanus and has been teaching arts for many years at the Rudolf Steiner Berufskolleg at Dortmund. From 2008 to 2010 she worked as a research fellow in the Institut für empirische Sozialforschung at the Alanus University. At present she is a free working Artist.

E-mail: atelier.boehle@web.de

Jonathan Code is an adult educator, researcher and a student of social and environmental education. He works as Head of Program at Hiram Institute and within this develops and teaches courses for adults in the Ruskin Mill Educational Trust. Jonathan Code teaches a variety of courses, also outside the UK, such as courses in soap making as an introduction to holistic science teaching, workshops for biodynamic apprentices and introductions in Goethean phenomenology.

E-mail: jonathan.code@rmc.rmet.org.uk

Axel Föller-Mancini is working as a research associate at the Center for Integrative Medicine of the University of Witten / Herdecke. He has also a teaching assignment at the Alanus University of Arts and Social Sciences in Alfter, Germany (Faculty of Education).

E-mail: axel.foeller-mancini@uni-wh.de

Bronwen Haralambous has a long term interest in anthroposophy and experience as a high school teacher in a Steiner school. More recently her qualifications include a Masters in Educational Leadership and an Advanced Diploma in Holistic Counselling and Psychotherapy. She is an Adjunct Professional Associate at the University of Canberra where she has assisted in setting up a Graduate Certificate in Steiner Education as a pathway towards a Masters Degree.

E-mail: bronwen.haralambous@canberra.edu.au

Thomas William Nielsen is an Assistant Professor at the University of Canberra, Australia. A member of the 2009 National Values Education Project Advisory Committee, he has served in several of the Australian Government values and wellbeing education projects (2004-2010). He is program leader of the Imagination and Education Research Group, University of Canberra branch, and has received several teaching awards, including the 2008 Australian Learning and Teaching Council Citation for Outstanding Contributions to Student Learning.

E-mail: thomas.nielsen@canberra.edu.au

Jürgen Peters studied maths and pedagogy and has been a Waldorf high school teacher for many years. He also was engaged in the teacher training programs in Witten Annen and Wilten, N.H. in the US. Since 2009 he is a research fellow in the Institut für empirische Sozialforschung at the Alanus University focussing on research projects and empirical studies.

E-mail: juergen.peters@alanus.edu

Henning Pätzold is professor for Education with an emphasis on research and development in organisations at the University Koblenz-Landau, Campus Koblenz, Germany. Before, he was professor for Education at the Freie Hochschule Mannheim. His research interests and publications cover, among other issues, learning theory and learning research, European adult education, formal learning and responsibility in education.

E-mail: paetzold@uni-koblenz.de

Johannes Wagemann has studied electrical engineering, physics, mathematics, pedagogics and philosophy. Initially he worked in the image processing research, for ten years he is teaching at the Waldorf School in Essen. Recently he has completed his dissertation on a transdisciplinary approach to the mind and brain problem (University of Witten/Herdecke, Germany).

E-mail: j.wagemann@web.de